

Godey's Lady's Book, August 1869

One thing, perhaps, has escaped the attention of our readers. This great work was begun, carried on and completed by men only. No woman has laid a rail: no woman has made a survey. The muscular force and the intellectual guidance have come alike from men. It is worth while for the